Uber is über upset about potential Cambridge ouster

Parked. Ride services that use technology not registered with the city's hackney division could be driven out.

Uber is speaking out against regulations proposed by Cambridge officials that the company said are "specifically designed to shut down the innovative transportation options" offered by the popular ride service.

The regulations would impose fines starting at $100 on ride services using technology that are not registered with the city's hackney division, which would not only affect Uber but also its competitors Lyft and Sidecar. They would also put a minimum price of $50 for any non-taxi car ride, regardless of the distance.

The Cambridge License Commission was expected to hold a meeting Tuesday night as a "first step" in reviewing the draft regulations. Commissioners planned to discuss and take comment, but no votes were expected.

"It is important to note that this draft policy recommendation is not targeted at Uber but an industry-wide policy," said Elizabeth Lint, the commission's executive director.

If put into place, the regulations would have an "enormous impact" on Cambridge residents, visitors and businesses, Uber said on its blog.

Proposed new rules

- Would put a minimum price of $50 for any non-taxi car ride, regardless of time or distance.
- Would prohibit passengers from requesting a ride on-demand from anyone other than a taxi.
- Would forbid any technological device from being part of fare calculation during a ride.

"For a city known for its innovation and progressiveness, it is shocking that Cambridge would cling so blindly to the past and ban an innovation that thousands of its residents and small businesses value and use on a daily basis," Uber said.

Uber irate

"... These regulations were drafted under the radar, without seeking or considering the input of Cambridge residents."

Uber statement

"Even more unbelievably, there has been no meaningful effort to ... publicize the process or timeline for passing it."

Drug abuse. Data sharing to fight opioid 'epidemic'

New England states will work toward data sharing and a cross-border prescription monitoring program in their effort to combat what they said was an epidemic of opioid abuse.

The agreement on the data sharing followed a meeting of five New England governors on Tuesday at Brandeis University where they discussed regional efforts to address the drug problem. Gov. Deval Patrick met with the governors of Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Additionally, the university's Prescription Drug Monitoring Program Center of Excellence will use federal funding to analyze data from each state's prescription monitoring program and recommend best practices to assist with the region's efforts, Patrick's office said.

Patrick in March declared a public health emergency in response to the growing opioid addiction epidemic. Between 2000 and 2012, the number of unintentional fatal opioid overdoses increased 90 percent, according to the state.

BAA announces 2015 Marathon registration date

The Boston Athletic Association announced on Tuesday the registration date for the 2015 Boston Marathon.

Registration for next year's race opens Sept. 8. As in previous years, the fastest qualifiers will be able to register first. A field size has not yet been determined, organizers said.

This year's field size was increased because of the thousands of runners who were unable to finish because of the 2013 bombings.

The registration fee for the 2015 Boston Marathon for qualifiers is $175 and $225 for international residents.

DCF ordered to return teen to parents

A Massachusetts juvenile court judge has returned custody of Connecticut teenager Justina Pelletier to her parents, effective today.

Pelletier, 16, was placed in Massachusetts' Department of Children and Families custody more than a year ago following a dispute between her parents and Boston Children's Hospital regarding her medical care. Since then, Pelletier's family has been engaged in a heated custody battle with the state.

For the last few months the teen has lived in a residential treatment facility near her Connecticut home.

Greenway airspace to get artsy

Look up. A unique art installation will draw attention over the Greenway.

Next spring, a billowy aerial sculpture will be suspended hundreds of feet over the central section of the Rose Kennedy Greenway, shifting gently with Boston's ever-changing weather.

Janet Echelman, a world renowned artist based in Brookline, will create the installation, which will be displayed until the fall of 2015 as part of the Greenway Conservancy's Public Art Program.

"Here in Boston, I'm excited to visually knit together the fabric of the city with art," said Echelman. "The creation of the Greenway was a seminal event in the unfolding of our city, so I'm delighted and humbled to be a part of its transformation into a vibrant cultural destination."

According to the conservancy, which announced the project Tuesday, the ultra-lightweight, knotted-fiber sculpture will "move gently with the wind in ever-changing patterns. In daylight, it casts shadow-drawings on the ground, and at night it becomes a beacon with dynamic colored light."

The work aims to bring vibrancy and elevate public art in Boston, according to Susan Smith, co-chair of the Richard and Susan Smith Family Foundation, which offered grants for the installation.

"We are thrilled to help bring this visually compelling gift of art to Boston to surprise, engage and inspire all who see it," said Smith.

Hundreds of thousands of acres of sea off Mass. coast open for wind energy

A massive stretch of water 14 miles south of Martha's Vineyard will be home to the nation's largest offshore area for wind energy commercial development. The announcement by state and federal officials was made on Tuesday and means that more than 742,000 acres off of the Massachusetts coast are now available for wind energy commercial development. The proposed area is the largest in the nation and nearly doubles the federal offshore acreage available for commercial-scale wind energy projects.

The land will be competitively leased to companies seeking to develop wind turbines in the federal waters off of the Massachusetts coast. The Bureau of Ocean Energy Management will auction the area off as four leases.

Officials did not say in their announcement how many wind turbines are expected to be built in the area. METRO

Gaming. Casino foes say they have signatures

Those opposed to casinos in Massachusetts believe they have enough signatures to put a repeal question on the state's ballot in November.

A group pushing for a ballot question to repeal the state's expanded gaming law will today submit more than 26,000 signatures of people who support the effort.

However, whether voters can decide to repeal the state's gaming law is in doubt. The state's highest court is expected to rule by early next month if the question can appear on the ballot. Casino opponents have challenged a ruling made by Attorney General Martha Coakley's office that rejected the ballot initiative saying it takes private property.

"Once these legal and organizing hurdles are behind us, we see a clear path to victory because voters are fed up and know we can do better than casinos for Massachusetts," casino repeal chairman John Ribeiro said. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Lawyers for a group of acrobats injured at a Providence circus last month while performing a "human chandelier" hair-hanging stunt plan to file a lawsuit after they conclude an in-depth investigation into what caused the horrific accident.

Eight women were injured after plummeting three stories to the floor at a Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus on May 4. Two suffered spinal cord injuries, and doctors say they don't know if they'll ever be able to walk again.

Lawyers said the performers have undergone nearly 12 surgeries collectively.

Four of the acrobats made emotional statements Tuesday at a press conference at the Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital in Boston.

"We are trying to come to terms with knowing we will never be the same," said aerial performer Viktoriya Medeiros, 34, of Bulgaria. "We are happy to be here, alive."

Investigators have said a broken carabiner clip may be to blame for the accident.

Iraqi leader accuses Saudis of 'genocide'

Iraq's Shi'ite rulers defied Western calls on Tuesday to reach out to Sunnis to defuse the uprising in the north of the country, declaring a boycott of Iraq's main Sunni political bloc and accusing Sunni power Saudi Arabia of promoting "genocide."

Washington has made clear that it wants Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki to embrace Sunni politicians as a condition of U.S. support to fight an advance by forces.

In a rerun of failed efforts at bridging sectarian and ethnic divisions, Shi'ite, Sunni and Kurdish leaders met behind closed doors and stood frostily before cameras as Maliki's Shi'ite predecessor Ibrahim al-Jaafari denounced "terrorist powers" and supporting Iraqi sovereignty.

US military nabs suspected ringleader in Libya attack

Terrorist attack. President Obama announced military special forces captured the leader of the 2012 U.S. Embassy attack.

The United States said on Tuesday it had captured a suspected ringleader of the 2012 attack on the U.S. diplomatic compound in Benghazi, Libya, a raid that killed four Americans including the U.S. ambassador and ignited a political firestorm in Washington.

President Barack Obama said in a statement that he had authorized the operation in Libya on Sunday in which U.S. military troops, working with law enforcement personnel, captured Ahmed Abu Khatallah.

"Since the deadly attacks on our facilities in Benghazi, I have made it a priority to find and bring to justice those responsible for the deaths of four brave Americans," Obama said, adding that Khatallah would "face the full weight of the American justice system."

A U.S. official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Khatallah was being held aboard an American ship after he was grabbed on the outskirts of Benghazi in an operation carried out by U.S. special operations forces.

Khatallah's capture was a victory for Obama, who has been accused by Republicans of playing down the role of al Qaeda in the attacks. REUTERS

50 Years of Excellence and Opportunity at UMass Boston

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

On June 16, 1964 the Massachusetts Legislature approved a bill that established the University of Massachusetts Boston. Two days later, on June 18, Governor Endicott Peabody signed the bill into law.

Even though much has changed at Boston's public university over the past 50 years, UMass Boston remains committed to its primary responsibility: providing educational opportunities, academic excellence, and high value for students. Since the first 1,000 students were admitted in 1965, UMass Boston has grown into an institution of more than 16,000 students enrolled in more than 175 programs.

And UMass Boston continues to broaden the opportunity it provides for a first-rate education, adding academic programs at all levels and professional development courses in the College of Advancing and Professional Studies (CAPS). A newly created Honors College provides enhanced opportunities for academic achievement, and the new School for the Environment offers research opportunities in places such as UMass Boston's Nantucket Field Station and the New England Aquarium.

Over the years, UMass Boston has also developed a reputation for innovative research that addresses complex issues in urban settings. The university has partnered with the Dana-Farber/Harvard Cancer Center to study health care disparities among underserved populations, earning a research award from the National Institutes of Health.

The university is transforming the campus with a new Integrated Sciences Complex, opening its doors this fall; a new Edward M. Kennedy Institute for the United States Senate, opening next spring; and a new General Academic Building No. 1, scheduled to open next fall.

I encourage you to discover UMass Boston at www.umb.edu/discover.

Climate change threatens tourism

Climate change is a growing threat to tourism, from thawing slopes at ski resorts to coral reefs hit by warmer seas, and the industry itself should do more to curb its soaring greenhouse gas emissions, a study showed on Tuesday.

Tourism's greenhouse gas emissions, on current rising trends buoyed by ever more travel, are set to reach about 10 percent of the world total by 2025 from between 3.9 and 6 percent now, it said.

"The tourism industry will be severely impacted by climate change," according to the study.

Warmer winters are shortening winter sports seasons and threatening the viability of some ski resorts, according to the report, which distills findings about tourism from studies this year by the U.N. panel of scientists. REUTERS

Travel accounts for about 75 percent of tourism's greenhouse gas emissions. More efficient planes, vehicles and greener fuels could help curb emissions, according to the report.

After deadly tornado, 'Pilger is gone'

Residents were forced to leave a Nebraska village that was leveled by a tornado that killed a child and injured more than two dozen people. But they began returning on Tuesday to salvage belongings from their battered homes and businesses, including a church and school. The town of Pilger, just several blocks wide and home to about 350 people, took a direct hit Monday afternoon as tornadoes swept across a farming area in northeast Nebraska, devastating up to 75 percent of its buildings, officials said. "Pilger is gone," said Sanford Goshorn, director of emergency management for Stanton County. REUTERS / JAKE WRAGGE / NORFOLK DAILY NEWS

Nuns sue strip club near their Chicago-area convent

A group of Chicago-area nuns is suing a strip club behind their convent, complaining of noise, glaring neon lights, fist fights and heaps of litter that include empty whiskey bottles and used condoms.

The Missionary Sisters of St. Charles Borromeo said Illinois mandates a 1,000-foot buffer zone between adult entertainment venues and places of worship or schools. The suit, filed on Friday in Cook County, also names the village of Stone Park, where the strip club is located.

3 Ryan Gosling hoax hits Facebook

Nearly 1 million readers were taken in recently by a bogus story about Ryan Gosling trying to adopt a baby. An unverified account posted a photo of Gosling laughing with a baby along with a lengthy explanation purportedly written by the "Drive" star. The supposed Gosling post described how he'd tried to get custody of an infant because the mother had wanted him to after she died of cancer. "One year later after the adoption, his biological father wanted him. Of course, I put up a fight, but he won," the post stated. "We have to stop and be thankful for our children and children should stop and be thankful for their parents. What I truly learned most of all is, every child needs love. Save thousands of children and meet me while doing it." The post included a link to buy limited-edition T-shirts and a chance to win a date with Gosling, all in exchange for donations to the Orphanage Home Foundation, which doesn't actually exist. The post earned 936,000 likes and was shared more than 51,000 times before it was deleted.

The unguarded 'Gardener'

Wonder from Down Under. Courtney Barnett is a glimpse of what Lena Dunham might sing about if she wrote songs.

Courtney Barnett plays tonight at The Sinclair (52 Church St., Cambridge). For more info, visit www.sinclaircambridge.com. / TAJETTE O'HALLORAN

Though Courtney Barnett claims to have a shy, quiet nature, any trace of that melts away onstage, where she performs as though there's nowhere else she could be more at ease. The Australian singer is the Lena Dunham of the music business, but with the short story skills of someone like Miranda July. From under shaggy brunette bangs, her lyrics come like a lazy challenge: "I sleep in late / Another day / Oh what a wonder / Oh what a waste / It's a Monday / It's so mundane / What exciting things / Will happen today?" Those are the first lines of her breakout hit, "Avant Gardener," from "The Double EP: A Sea of Split Peas."

A few tracks later, on "Are You Looking After Yourself?" she sings, "I don't know what I was thinking, I should get a job / I don't know what I was drinking, I should get a dog / Should get married, have some babies, watch the evening news," and pretty much echoes the innermost thoughts of her entire generation. The material plays well in the States, obviously.

"Going from not even having ever traveled and just assuming I would never travel, I just assumed that no one would ever hear my music outside of Melbourne," she says.

"Every time it grows a little bit more, it gets a bit more surreal."

'Split Peas'

Ambulance ride of destiny

A self-proclaimed compulsive note-keeper, Barnett draws on real-life experiences. "Avant Gardener" chronicles a seemingly innocuous attempt at gardening that ends in an ambulance ride: "It was just an anxiety attack or something I think, and we didn't know if it was like an allergy on top of it because I got this weird rash and then I stopped breathing," she says. "After it happened, I went and stayed in the country for two weeks and did heaps of writing. ... But we'd already written the music. It was weird ... It kind of happened all separately, and then I kind of figured out how the words went with the music."

The Weekly Yelp. Your top Provincetown spots

Tourists flock to the shores, shops and snacks saturating Provincetown's streets. But admit it: You love it, too! Hop a ferry from Boston Harbor, and in as little as 90 minutes, you could be soaking up sun and fun at these top spots from the tip of the Cape!

The Canteen

255 Commercial St.
Staff at this little hole in the wall are friendly and make fantastic sandwiches. It's the perfect place to stop when you've been exploring the shops and beaches around Provincetown. I had the cod banh mi and it was delicious. ANYA W.

Jimmy's HideAway

179 Commercial St.
The restaurant is kind of tucked down and away (hence, HideAway) but the entrance looked cute and New England-y so we ventured in. I ordered the Free Range Organic Statler Chicken Breast and it was probably one of the tastiest, most perfectly cooked pieces of chicken I've ever eaten. It had a cheesy corn bread pudding served with it that was decadent and to die for. JESSICA S.

Marine Specialties Inc.

235 Commercial St.
Fun spot with oodles of trash and treasures — NOT to miss. Kids, grown-ups and everyone in between will LOVE this spot. Too zany to describe, just stop in. ANN P.

Yelp.com connects people with great local businesses in their neighborhood — everything from bars, restaurants, and spas to dog groomers, mechanics, even dentists!

Vincent Piazza goes from "Boardwalk Empire" to the only mostly less tough "Jersey Boys." / GETTY IMAGES

Interview. The "Boardwalk Empire" star talks about playing the scariest of the "Jersey Boys."

Vincent Piazza is best known for playing Lucky Luciano, one of the leads on "Boardwalk Empire." He might seem an odd fit for Clint Eastwood's film of "Jersey Boys," especially since he's the only one of the main four actors who hasn't come from some production of the longtime musical favorite. Then again, he's playing Tommy DeVito, the toughest and scariest of the Four Seasons, whose history is a lot sketchier than their clean-cut sound might suggest.

Did you talk to Tommy DeVito as research?
Never met the man. I only got to know him through the screenplay — that and anecdotes. The rest of the cast did the musical for years, and they would hear these stories from meeting the real guys. And then Mr. [Frank] Valli would be on the set. There was a treasure chest of great stories.

Some of which probably couldn't be in the film.
But you could give shades and colors of them. For instance, Michael Lomenda [who plays Nick Massi] and I watched this raw footage of Massi and Tommy DeVito doing a soundcheck. They were such great friends that they had nicknames: "Tamooch" and "Machoach." So when [in the film] I was leaving prison and he was going in, he said, "Tamooch!" and I said, "Machoach!"

The Four Seasons were certainly tougher than one might imagine.
I think that's a surprise for the audience. There's such a glamour associated with the '50s and '60s, because it was pre-TMZ and pre-Twitter and [pre-]Facebook. [The Four Seasons] may not have gotten off the ground if those kinds of media channels existed.

Of the group, you're playing the rough one.
I think Tommy's strength in the beginning was his personality. When they got out of the neighborhood, that strong personality became one of his weaknesses. He felt he had to keep a foot in the neighborhood. That's something I can identify with. Maybe those people, when they get scared, they want to go home. The world outside of New Jersey can be a little intimidating.

Could you already sing?
I was kind of thrust into the music. The "Jersey Boys" community was so helpful. They gave me a crack team for the choreography and the singing. And Mr. Eastwood put a live band behind us. What that did for me was give this surge of energy. It was humbling, though, because I wouldn't say, "In 30 days I could sing four-part harmony with guys who've done it hundreds of times."

A good fella

The Joe Pesci Show

One of the crazier parts of "Jersey Boys" is that Joe Pesci knew them when he was younger and is a character in the show and film. In "Goodfellas" he played a character named Tommy DeVito.
I actually explored that with the character. I'm playing the older guy with a younger Joe Pesci, so I'm wondering how much of [DeVito's] personality informed him. I would actually act like him every now and then. Any chance I had to throw in a "prick" or something like that. I felt comfortable doing that because I was trying to establish that kind of relationship with Joseph Russo, who plays Joe Pesci.

America's most wanted. Ice Cube knows sequels can be a headache

Ice Cube, who played the patience-tested captain in charge of Channing Tatum and Jonah Hill in "21 Jump Street," is back and grumpier than ever in "22 Jump Street," a sequel well aware of itself. The former N.W.A. rapper fills us in on the new film and the awkward legacy of "F— tha Police."

What did you think when you saw how much more you'd be doing in this one compared to the first?
I liked it, you know? I think people love Capt. Dickson. [Laughs] He talks as much s— as possible, and everybody's with it. It was cool just to get the tone right and to do a movie that people dig that's fun — as fun as the first one. I think our greatest asset is low expectations.

After the success of the first, it would seem expectations would be pretty high.
Yeah, but people in the back of their minds don't think we could get the sequel as good as the first one. People rarely do. It's not easy to include the audience without taking them out of the story, but [directors Phil Lord and Chris Miller] do a great job of letting people know that we're making a cheese-cake out of a cheesy idea. [Laughs] This kind of movie, the worst thing it could do is take itself too seriously.

Are you taking any lessons here as you go into planning a sequel for "Ride Along"?
Yeah, you know, I'm a vet at doing sequels, but they're hit-and-miss. I think the real page you need to take away from it is to make sure you do a new movie that can stand on its own two feet. NED EHRBAR

The pigs

How often do people ask about the irony of you playing a cop, since you got your start with "F— tha Police"? And how tired are you of getting that question?
They actually happen every interview, and I'm not tired of it. If you really know what I'm talking about in the music, you know I'm talking about dirty cops, I'm talking about corrupt cops, I'm talking about cops who abuse authority. I'm not talking about the cops who come and save your grandmother when she's getting mugged.

Vacation home sales on the rise

Looks like quite a few of you owe us a beach party invitation. According to a survey from the National Association of Realtors, vacation home sales in the U.S. rose 29.7 percent last year to an estimated 717,000 properties, up from 553,000 in 2012. These sales accounted for 13 percent of all transactions last year.

Making 'Fetch' happen

For more info

Fetch Storage

Be it ski gear, patio furniture or holiday decorations, "Storage is a necessary evil," says Patel. "It affects most people as they go through certain life events. Normally, you rent a truck, then rent some storage space with uncertain pricing. Then you schlep it out there and wonder later on what you put in the boxes, and search through it all to find things. We pick it up, give a detailed inventory and deliver what you need back when you want it." 888-610-1684. www.fetchstorage.com

Can't find a place for your AC unit during the winter or your skis during the summer? These guys are on the case. / FETCH Storage. The Boston-based startup plans to make storage easier and (hopefully) profitable for all.

Fetch Storage co-founders Brij Patel and Jesse Mastro have a simple business model: Their customers don't have to lift a finger. North End-based Fetch offers bespoke storage, including pick up and return. Well, Fetch customers don't have to lift a finger until later this year, which is when the 33-year-old Northeastern University grads plan to roll out a mobile app giving customers instant access to monitor and control their own storage. Call it a veritable virtual peek in the attic, just a screen tap away. Patel says the app will also promote a Fetch community where people swap, share, sell and even rent their stored goods such as power tools.

"Storage can promote hoarding; this promotes a sharing economy. People can make some money on the things they have sitting in storage. It's not just money-based, though. It's also better for the environment than having endless stuff sitting in storage," says Patel.

Apparently, there's so much stuff sitting in storage in the U.S. that it could fill Manhattan: "It's sad and unhealthy from a societal point of view."

Environmental concerns weren't what prompted Fetch's formation though. After the pair graduated, they started Rent-an-AC, which similarly takes the schlep out of summer cooling by installing and retrieving air conditioners as customers need them. Problem was, the niche seasonal business boomed for 12 weeks of the year.

"We already had the infrastructure: vans, storage space and a great team," says Patel. "Fetch is for a similar customer who's short on space."

Fetch's pricing structure is simple: You pay for storage you use, starting at $3 per month, including pick-up and drop-off in under one hour. Says Patel: "Creating a little space in a tiny apartment on Beacon Hill can mean a lot to daily life quality."

App-arel. SeeMe turns your filtered photos into cool, wearable art

App art just reached a new level. SeeMe is similar to Instagram in that it's a feed of photos, but what makes it different is that, with a few clicks, you can turn any image in your feed into a T-shirt.

"There are some amazing photos on SeeMe that you're not going to find anywhere else," says founder William Etundi.

Many artists use SeeMe to post their unique illustrations, but there are still the beloved Internet trends, like cats. "Cat images are very popular as T-shirt prints, [and they] look amazing," says Etundi.

SeeMe started back in 2012 as a community for artists and grew rapidly. The people behind the app wanted to find a way their images could be shared as social objects, just like Polaroid photographs were in the '70s and '80s. With SeeMe, they found a way artists could earn money and get their work "out there."

Users can use hashtags to find whatever they're looking for out of the more than 27 million images.

Once you've chosen an image you want on a T-shirt, you can manipulate it by zooming in or out, and also design your own front and back however you want.

Cost

A T-shirt is $26 if you use your own image. It's $32 if you choose someone else's.

"This way each and every T-shirt is unique," says Etundi.

It costs $26 to turn your own photo into a T-shirt and $32 to use someone else's art, with $6 going to the original photographer.

Even though there are other ways you can design your own T-shirt, SeeMe is the only place where you can create an all-over print, Etundi tells us. "The best part is that with our app, unlike others, it takes only seconds to make a stunning shirt or product."

The funniest T-shirt Etundi has done is a picture of one of his co-workers. And now everyone in the SeeMe offices is running around with it. "It's hilarious," says Etundi. "We're wearing our co-worker to work!" LASSE EMIL KRISTIANSEN

No more dieting

Don't fall for 'Diet Cults'

If you've ever rolled your eyes at a fad diet — or tried one and didn't get the promised results — you'll like what Matt Fitzgerald has to say.

A certified sports nutritionist and author of the best-selling "Racing Weight," Fitzgerald's new book is called "Diet Cults." Turns out there's no one right way of dieting, but rather sensible ways of being healthy that don't require a high tolerance for one kind of food (or total avoidance of another).

We talk to the nutritionist who finds diet books insufferable.

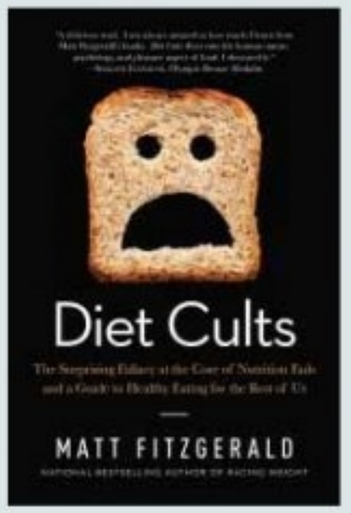
What makes your book different from other diet books?
Most diet books present a particular diet as the best diet or better than any other diet, but I'm not doing that. I'm first of all exposing the idea that there is a single best diet as false. Secondly, I'm making the argument that you can't just eat anything you want and expect to be healthy. Human beings are very adaptable dietetically, however, so you can eat in a way that conforms to your culture and personal preferences and still be very healthy.

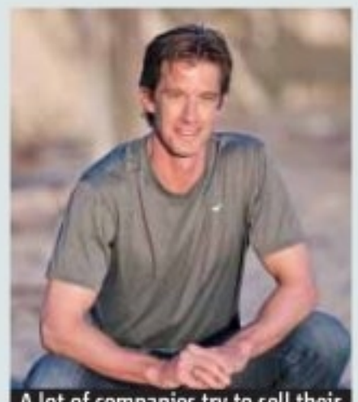
Why are there so many only-one-way diets?
I think the conventional answer to that question is money. Diets are a competitive marketplace.

But I also think there's an ancient tradition of judging other people on how they eat that has nothing to do with capitalism. If you go back to ancient cultures, they tended to distinguish themselves from other cultures through their diets. We eat this way; those guys eat that way, and our way is better. That motivates us to evangelize on behalf of whatever diet we decided is the best.

What are the common mistakes people make when it comes to their diet choices?
[It] can complicate your life if suddenly there are things you grew up eating and enjoying, but you don't allow yourself to eat them anymore. By focusing on a nutrient instead of the food, you can make things more difficult for yourself than they really need to be.

LASSE EMIL KRISTIANSEN





A lot of companies try to sell their diets as the only one that works. The author of "Diet Cults" says it isn't so. / PROVIDED

New Research Showing Progress in Breast Cancer Treatment

Breast cancer is the most common cancer among American women (except for skin cancers), and more than 230,000 new cases will be diagnosed this year, according to the American Cancer Society (ACS). This translates to about 1 in 8 women in the U.S. who will develop invasive breast cancer in their lifetime, the ACS says.

With such a large population of patients, researchers at the Susan F. Smith Center for Women's Cancers at Dana-Farber in Boston are actively pursuing new approaches to breast cancer therapy, prevention and symptom management through clinical trials. In recent months, results from these trials have provided new information about possible treatments that could be more effective in fighting the disease.

- In one recent study, researchers have found new drug combinations that might be more effective against triple-negative breast cancer, a form of the disease that affects 10-15 percent of breast cancer patients. The study showed that when the chemotherapy drug carboplatin is used, or added to other chemotherapy treatments, there was a sharp increase in the number of tumors that shrank away completely.

"We want to avoid giving patients extra drugs that they do not need, and, if possible, replace current treatment with a drug that is more specific to a woman's cancer and potentially more effective," says.

Winer also worked with researchers on another combination treatment method, which uses a less toxic approach in women with small, HER2+ cancer who have already undergone surgery. In spite of having fewer side effects than some of the standard regimens, it was highly effective in this group of patients with early stage disease.

Eric Winer, MD, senior author of the study and director of the Breast Oncology Program in the Susan F. Smith Center for Women's Cancers at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute

Another recent study led by experts at Dana-Farber has shown that exercise can reduce joint pain caused by certain breast cancer drugs. These drugs, known as aromatase inhibitors, are used to treat post-menopausal patients who have breast cancer tumors that are sensitive to hormones. While effective, the aromatase inhibitors often cause joint pain.

According to the study, moderate daily exercise helped decrease joint pain in the women who were taking the aromatase inhibitors. The pain also decreased significantly more in those who exercised than in those who didn't.

If you or someone you know is looking for more information about the latest breast cancer treatments and research, tune in to a live video web chat with Dana-Farber on May 22, 2014, at 1p.m. Eric Winer, MD will answer questions about new therapies, clinical trials, and exciting new research in the world of breast cancer. For more information or to tune in to the chat, visit www.danafarber.org/webchats. Email your questions to Dr. Winer at webchats@dfci.harvard.edu.

"This is one of the first studies to identify an approach – particularly a non-medical approach – that can effectively lower joint pain for these patients," says the study's senior author, Jennifer Ligibel, MD, a breast oncologist with the Susan F. Smith Center. "Exercise offers an attractive option for patients who want to continue taking these drugs but who are burdened by their side effects."

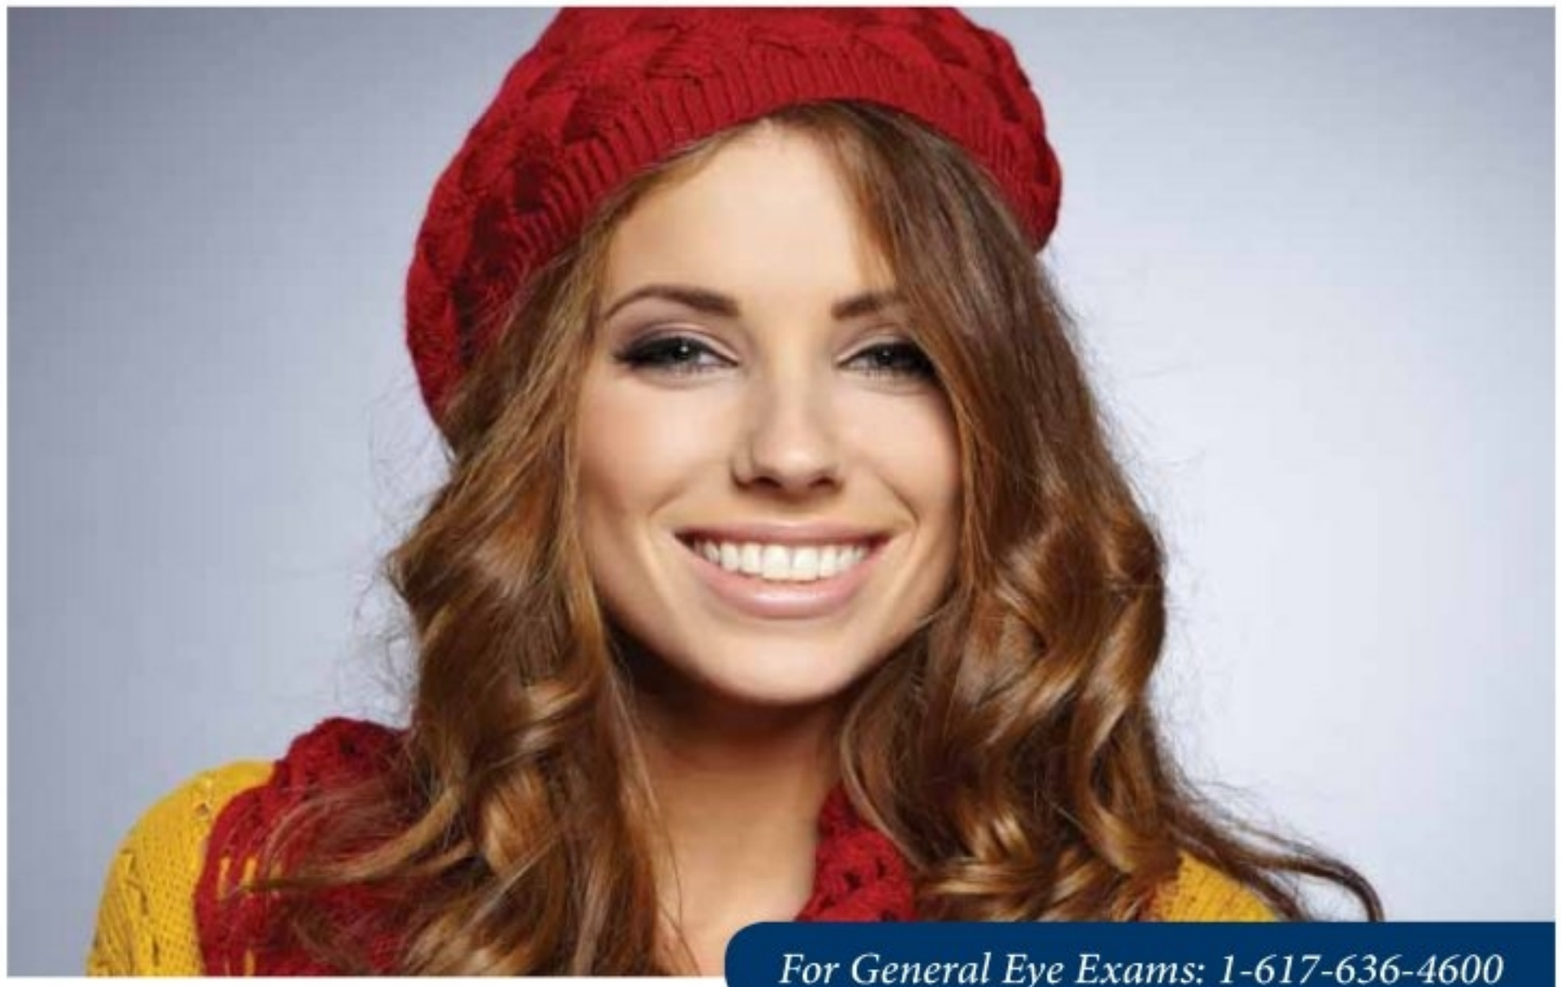
LASIK & Beyond

Taking Human Sight To The Next Level

At New England Eye Center, we truly are taking sight to the next level. Thanks to recent advances in laser and lens implant technology, our highly-trained specialists are helping patients of all ages enjoy the type of clearer, more natural vision they desire. Vision for the way we live here in New England!



New YEAR, New VISION, New YOU!

Still looking at life through rose-colored glasses or contact lenses? Make 2014 the year you resolve to join the millions of men and women enjoying NEW VISION thanks to advancements in eye care from LASIK laser vision correction, to Visian ICL™ (Implantable Collamer Lens) and Laser Cataract Surgery.

Take advantage of our LASIK & Beyond New Year's Resolution Celebration now underway at New England Eye Center. Make 2014 the year you resolve to join the millions of men and women enjoying NEW VISION. From providing routine general eye care, to the latest breakthroughs in LASIK laser vision correction - or the recent advancements in ICL technology and Laser Cataract Surgery - our surgeons and staff are committed to making this new year the best of all.

617-636-7800 • MyLasikDoc.com

New England Eye Center

From our all-laser, bladeless LASIK procedure – to exciting developments like our Visian Implantable lens - our commitment to leading edge technology is surpassed only by our dedication to personalized patient care. Patients of New England Eye Center find confidence in knowing we offer experience you can trust and technology you can rely on.

NASA-Approved LASIK - Our all-laser, bladeless LASIK at New England Eye Center has greatly improved results and helped take the fear out of having LASIK. The vast majority of our LASIK and PRK patients now achieve 20/20 vision at distance without glasses or contact lenses. Our method of LASIK is the same type approved for NASA astronauts and military pilots.

Implantable Contact Lens - New England Eye Center is among a select group of practices in the country offering patients the benefits of the Visian Implantable Collamer Lens (ICL). Unlike LASIK, the Visian corrects vision by inserting a delicate intraocular lens-like device atop the eye's natural lens, which is why the Visian is also referred to as the 'Implantable Contact Lens.' All of the refractive surgeons at New England Eye Center are qualified and experienced in performing this brief outpatient procedure to insert the Visian ICL. Because no corneal or other tissue is removed in the Visian ICL procedure, visual recovery is extremely rapid and the ICL can potentially be replaced if the eye's focus changes over time.

Refractive Lens Exchange - If you're frustrated with reading glasses and bifocals, our refractive specialists perform a procedure known as Refractive Lens Exchange. By replacing your eye's aging natural lens with a Intraocular Lens Implant customized specifically for your visual needs - and your lifestyle - allowing you to see better, look younger and never have to worry about developing cataracts!

Laser Cataract Surgery - For seniors experiencing changes in their vision – or who have been diagnosed with a cataract – New England Eye Center is turning the dream of Laser Cataract Surgery into reality. We are currently among only the top 3% of practices in the country to offer patients the added precision and accuracy of Laser Cataract Surgery using OptiMedica® Catalys™ Precision Laser System.

This year, take your vision to the NEXT LEVEL by giving yourself or a loved one the Gift of Sight. Now that's a Gift that keeps on Giving. A blessed New Year from the surgeons and staff of New England Eye Center.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Invest in you. Don't hesitate to seize an opportunity. Get the ball rolling and turn your dreams into reality. It's up to you to make things happen.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Don't wait until it's too late. If something isn't going your way, deal with it head-on. You'll feel much better once you know you have nothing to worry about.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. You will gain a lot of meaningful insight and information if you listen to an older or more experienced friend or relative. Free your head of distractions and offer your attention.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. You may feel let down if someone decides to do things without you. Let him or her have some space, and look for an activity you can pursue on your own.

Camelot now ruled by robber barons

As a young child in a Republican family, I had no love for President Kennedy. Yet as an adult, I have gained tremendous respect for Kennedy's performance and his appreciation of our liberties. Today, the press is just a puppet for the White House and all info that would shed light to all is censured under the guise of "national security." The fact of the matter is, both Bushes, Clinton and Obama were never working for our best interests and have allowed powers that created the Federal Reserve to finalize their takeover of our culture, rights and liberties, all in full view and approval of the major media. Sadly, the more money the military industrial complex spends and the more social programs are rammed down our throats, the more money Goldman Sachs and the Federal Reserve and their cohorts make on that debt! And when these financial thugs get caught stealing our children's future, they are too big to fail and jail!

JOSEPH DUPONT, VIA EMAIL

Gay should be normal, too

Re: 'Orientation is serious,' 'Everyone should get their say' (Metro, June 17) Letter writers Richard Feinberg and M. Hull are missing the point entirely. Gay and transgender people aren't rubbing any movement in anyone's faces. They don't want to feel like they're special or different. They simply want to be treated as equal human beings (rather than something like subterranean mole people), but society is far too bigoted. It's important for these people to announce who they are so others are inspired to do the same. Hopefully, this will change society so that one day, being gay or transgender will be as uncontroversial as being straight. Nobody is forcing you to like people that are different from you, but nobody is forcing you to be around them either.

Celts hunt for 'big fish'

The Celtics have wiggle room this offseason to bring in or ship out some big NBA names.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

This offseason in the NBA is expected to be the wildest in years, with great player movement across the league. At the front of most every trade, free agent and draft rumor right now is the Celtics. Outside of LeBron James, the Celtics have been linked to a handful of huge NBA names. Here's a look at the likelihood these big fish will be wearing green:

Visit Metro.us to see where Joel Embiid is headed in our latest NBA mock draft.

COULD PAUL PIERCE RETURN TO BOSTON? GETTY IMAGES

NBA offseason

Paul Pierce

Was there a wink and a nod between Pierce and Danny Ainge about the summer of 2014? Pierce has always said he wants to be part of a front office when he retires and it would make a ton of sense to see him re-sign with the Celtics at low money this summer — with assurance he'd be Ainge's right-hand man in a year or two and recoup some lost money. Pierce closing out his career with the Celtics would be great news for nearly everyone involved in this year-long saga ... except maybe Nets GM Billy King.

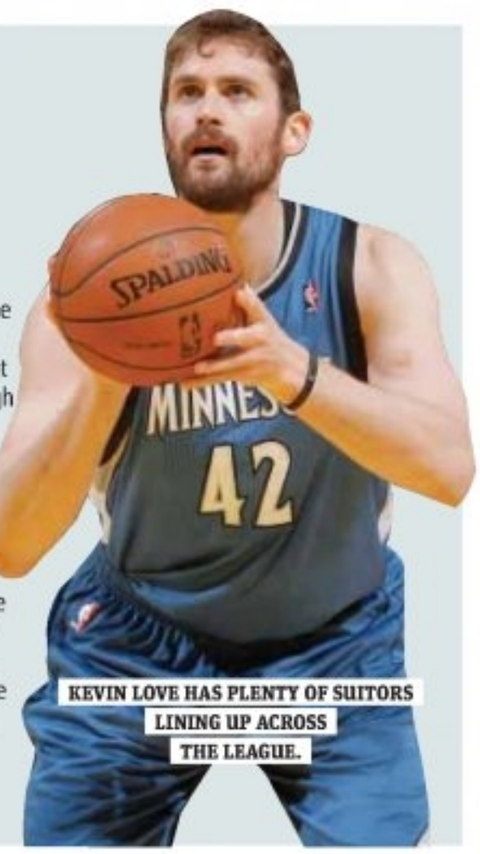
Likelihood he's in green: Good.

NBA offseason

Kevin Love

The Celtics were the perceived front-runners for Love a few weeks back when Love seemingly had a beer in every bar from Medford to Quincy over the course of 48 hours. The C's will be in the mix for his services, but the Timberwolves look as though they may roll the dice, let Love play out this season under Flip Saunders and hope he re-evaluates the situation in Minnesota in 2015. Plus, the Bulls, Warriors, Mavericks, Rockets, Lakers and Cavaliers are all in the running if he's on the market. That's a lot of competition, and the final price if a trade does go down will be sky-high.

Likelihood he's in green: Not good, but not impossible.



KEVIN LOVE HAS PLENTY OF SUITORS LINING UP ACROSS THE LEAGUE.

NBA offseason

Rajon Rondo

It's funny. Rondo probably never felt his situation in Boston was more secure than when Love visited Boston to start the month. But if the Celtics can't land Love and they stand pat and simply draft from their No. 6 position, the Rondo trade rumors will fly. Rondo wants to be part of a quick turnaround and showing Noah Vonleh or Aaron Gordon the NBA ropes is probably not his idea of a good time.

Likelihood he's (still) in green: Good.

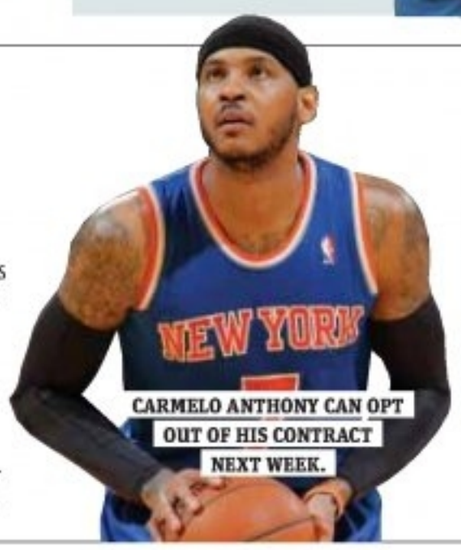
RAJON RONDO IS ENTERING THE FINAL YEAR OF HIS CONTRACT.

NBA offseason

Carmelo Anthony

LeBron James surely had to have noticed that Dwyane Wade was moving around like Eric Montross in the open floor during the NBA Finals, and one could easily see LeBron stabbing Wade in the back to join up with his other "Class of 2003" buddy. The other "championship situations" that Melo will be presented with over the next few weeks will likely be better than what the Celtics can pitch to Anthony, even if they somehow nab Love. You think Anthony would rather live in Miami and hang with LeBron or freeze in the Boston winter with Love? Speaking of the Celtics' tradition as a selling point is nice and all, but do all those championship banners in the rafters really carry any weight with a 30-year-old guy who grew up in New York and Baltimore?

Likelihood he's in green: Not good.



CARMELO ANTHONY CAN OPT OUT OF HIS CONTRACT NEXT WEEK.

MLB. Comeback attempt for Sizemore fizzles out

Grady Sizemore is likely done in Boston, as the outfielder was designated for assignment Tuesday. Sizemore, who was the feel-good story of spring training for the Red Sox as he hit .310 in 42 plate appearances, was hitting just .216 during the regular season.

"We were certainly hoping and thinking that this could have turned out different [and] we were still hoping it did up until very recently," Red Sox GM Ben Cherington told ESPN.

Getaway day

Sox with one more at Fenway before long trip

The Red Sox and Twins will wrap up their three-game series in a Wednesday matinee (1:30 p.m., NESN) at Fenway before Boston heads to Oakland to start a 10-game road trip. The Sox will send John Lackey (8-4, 3.24 ERA) to the mound Wednesday while the Twins will counter with Kyle Gibson (6-5, 3.55 ERA). Lackey has gotten wins in each of his last two starts.

MATT BURKE

NFL. Revis adjusting fine to system in New England

Patriots head coach Bill Belichick has a new toy to play with in cornerback Darrelle Revis and he discussed the former All-Pro's progress during the team's OTAs.

"There is still a lot for him to learn in a new system and all that," Belichick told ESPN. "But he's a very experienced and accomplished player and we'll just try to fit him in to the things we're doing, both individually and collectively and his other teammates in the secondary." METRO

Klinsmann hopeful of Altidore return

United States coach Jurgen Klinsmann believes Jozy Altidore can still contribute for the U.S. at this year's World Cup despite the striker having suffered a strained left hamstring in the U.S. win over Ghana on Monday. "We've got to see how he now reacts the next couple of days with his hamstring and we're full of hope that he comes back still in the tournament," Klinsmann told ESPN. The next game for the Americans is Sunday against Portugal (6 p.m., ESPN).

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Athletics (42-28)

Oakland continues to consistently be the best team in baseball overall with its spectacular plus-126 run differential, by far the best in the game. Scott Kazmir has been great for the A's this season, going 8-2 with a 2.05 ERA, the fourth-best mark in MLB.

No. 2

Giants (43-27)

San Francisco has now lost three straight, but even with that, it still has the best record in baseball. Giants closer Sergio Romo has 20 saves already.

No. 3

Brewers (42-29)

Catcher Jonathan Lucroy is having a tremendous season, bursting onto the scene as he has a batting line of .335/.397/.512.

No. 4

Blue Jays (41-30)

Several teams have gained ground on Toronto in the AL East lately. The Yankees could do some damage when they host Toronto this week.

No. 5

Cardinals (38-32)

The Cardinals are the hottest team in the NL at the moment, gaining ground on the Brewers after winning seven of their last 10.

No. 6

Angels (37-32)

Mike Trout continues to dominate with a .305/.394/.582 batting line. The Angels return home for six games after their series in Cleveland.

No. 7

Dodgers (37-34)

Josh Beckett is leading the Dodgers' pitching staff with a 2.49 ERA. But LA needs more from the other big names in it's rotation.

No. 8

Royals (37-32)

Kansas City is hot, having won eight straight. Outfielder Alex Gordon is quietly having a strong season, hitting .286 with 36 RBIs.

No. 9

Mariners (36-34)

After a sluggish start, Felix Hernandez has picked it up of late as he's 8-2 on the year with a 2.29 ERA, the eighth-best mark in baseball.

No. 10

Tigers (36-30)

A major reason for the Tigers' relative struggles is the poor season by Justin Verlander, who is 6-7 with a 4.98 ERA so far the year.

No. 11

Indians (36-35)

Michael Brantley took home AL Player of the Week honors, hitting .538 with three doubles, two homers and three RBIs last week.

No. 12

Braves (36-33)

The Braves haven't hit much this season, but have received solid starting pitching, especially Julio Teheran, who has a dominant 2.31 ERA.

No. 13

Nationals (35-33)

Though pitcher Stephen Strasburg is just 6-5 with a 3.06 ERA, he has recorded 113 strikeouts on the season, the second-most in the league.

No. 14

Marlins (35-34)

Much trade talk surrounds Giancarlo Stanton. But with the Marlins being just one game back of Atlanta, is unlikely he will be dealt.

No. 15

Yankees (35-33)

Without anyone standing out at the plate, the story continues to be how well Masahiro Tanaka has performed. His 2.02 ERA is third best in MLB.

No. 16

Orioles (35-34)

Baltimore has fallen to third place in the AL East and received some bad news when it was learned Matt Wieters will need Tommy John surgery.

JOBS

About Uber:
Uber is evolving the way the world moves. Our app enables riders to request rides on demand from their peers and from professional drivers.
The Opportunity:
You drive your car and set your schedule -- the app on your Uber iPhone will help you connect to your customers. Switch it on. See people near you who need a ride. Pick them up. Take them places. Get your fares. It's that simple.
The Details:
• Make $1300 a week in fares driving people around Boston
• 24/7 flexible hours: Work when you want
• Uber will provide the iPhone.
• Regular payments: Get checks deposited into your bank account weekly.
• Total transparency: Know who you're riding with and how much you made each trip.
Requirements:
• You're at least 23 years old
• Have a 4-door vehicle, 2005 or newer
• Have a driver's license and personal insurance
• A great personality and some entrepreneurial spirit!
